Wife Loyal to Accused Doctor

This loyal wife and smiling husband—the latter, Dr. Herbert N. Gerardell of Brookline—stood solidly together today in denying truth of charges brought against the physician by Miss Maria Fiore, once a maid in the Gerardell home. Mrs. Gerardell, shown holding her daughter, Charlotte, said of Miss Fiore: "Her whole story of having had a love affair with my husband and of having expected him to leave me and marry her is utterly untrue."

VATICAN SEES REVOLUTION IN GERMANY

Rome, Sept. 14 (INS)—Osservatore Romano, official organ of the Vatican, in a front page editorial, today formally accused Nazi Germany of wilful violations of its concordat with the Vatican, and predicted that the Hitler policy of "hatred and defamation of Catholicism" will lead to the disintegration of the Third Reich in bloody revolution."

The editorial was unsigned, but it was evident authentic utterance came from the hand of Pope Pius himself.

Warning that the revolution in Spain was preceded by a persecution campaign against the church, the editorial continued:

"Who can guarantee that the seeds of hatred and defamation of everything sacred, which, under the very eyes of the authorities, grew stronger momentarily will not eventually produce on German soil fruits which will strike terror to the hearts of every true friend of the German people and their welfare?

"Even in Spain, anti-religious books preceded the conscious or unconscious atrocities which followed. Whoever remembers the anti-clerical press of Spain before 1936 sees today with terrible clarity the bloody fruits."

Only a "complicated international situation" prevented Germany from announcing formal rupture of diplomatic relations with the Vatican, the editorial declared. This was interpreted as a reference to the link between Germany and Italy in the Mediterranean.

MOVE GROWS FOR BARRING OF BLACK

Special to Boston Evening American

New York, Sept. 14—While Associate Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court Hugo L. Black, in London, was dodging reporters today and refusing to answer any questions concerning the new charges that he is a member of the Ku Klux Klan, a great United States senatorial storm concerning him was growing here.

There were more demands by senators today for some means to keep Justice Black from actually taking his seat.

And further revelations of the details of how he became a life member of the secret hooded order were being published by a group of American newspapers which have secured publication rights from a news feature syndicate.

One of the high spots of the new

Selection of Black For Supreme Court Hasty and Unwise

THE selection of Hugo L. Black for the high office of Supreme Court justice was a hasty and unwise choice.

It was injudicious on the part of the President.

Hugo L. Black had nothing to recommend him, even to the President, except that he was a personal servitor of the President's, an office boy for the administration.

If Black is a sample of the kind of men the President would appoint to the Supreme Court of these great United States, then the American system of government, indeed the republic itself, has been saved by the band of patriotic senators who rejected the President's plan to control that great tribunal, that powerful protector of the people's rights.

Yet the Senate itself is not without blame for the endorsement of Black.

The reason for that endorsement was entirely

ANSETT BET ASH TRACED AT HEARING

By JAMES J. DELANEY

Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Providence, R. I., Sept. 14 — A trainer of race horses today told the Rhode Island horse racing division that Walter E. O'Hara's trainer threatened to "cut his head off" after O'Hara called him a "thief."

The witness, Carleton A. Estes, of Virginia, testified at the opening of the hearing called by the state racing division on charges brought against the Narragansett Racing Association, Inc., of which O'Hara is president and general manager.

This hearing was called by Governor Quinn in the attempt to oust O'Hara and to wipe out betting in an effort to show cause why the association's license should not be suspended or revoked.

BET CASH DRAWN

Before Estes testified Fred W. York, cashier of the Phenix Bank, Providence, testified that the day Narragansett opened this year, May 1, the sum of $25,000 was withdrawn by the racing association from the fund used exclusively to pay unclaimed winning tickets.

Although the meeting was private, records listed the attendants outside the office of the state racing division. The corridors leading to

Sally Hurley Taken to Her Home in Cambridge

After having been near death for weeks, Governor Hurley's eight-year-old daughter Sally was sufficiently recovered today to be taken home to Cambridge from the Hurley summer home in Hull.

The automobile which carried her was driven at less than 20 miles an hour, the trip taking approximately two hours.

In the car with Sally were her nurse and her special physician, Dr. Martin J. English.

Governor Hurley, in his own car rode ahead of the auto which carried his daughter.

A motorcycle escort of four police officers cleared the way.

After Sally had been taken into the Hurley home in Fresh Pond lane, Cambridge, Governor Hurley came out to speak to newspapermen.

"We do not know yet how well Sally stood the strain of her trip," he said. "But we feel her condition to be increasingly satisfactory. I personally appreciate consideration shown us by all reporters, cameramen and editors."

CONSTITUTION DAY ORDER BY HURLEY

Governor Charles F. Hurley, in a proclamation issued today, officially designated Friday as Constitution Day and declared a half-holiday throughout the Commonwealth.

Following the issuance of the proclamation the Governor called upon industrial, mercantile and other business establishments to dismiss at noon all employees who are members of military organizations in order that they may participate in the parade.

In the Governor's proclamation, which will be read in all public schools throughout the state and also posted in public buildings, the citizens of Massachusetts are asked to participate and observe the 150th anniversary of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States.

Immediately following the Governor's requests the Boston Retail Board of Trade notified the Massachusetts Bicentennial Committee that all local department stores will close their establishments at 4 o'clock, enabling employees to witness the Constitution Day parade.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY

Mayors and Boards of Selectmen of other cities and towns throughout the state requested local merchants to participate in the movement to close early Friday afternoon so that workers may witness the parade.

The Constitution Day commission also announced that a huge fireworks display would be staged on Boston Common following the parade.

Adjutant General Charles H. Cole, chief marshal of the parade, announced that all military organizations participating in the parade to participate in only regulation uniforms of the State militia.

The adjutant general stated today that Governor Hurley insists that the parade must be at least five hours long with more than 50,000 marchers and 50 floats in the line of march.

Orders banning automobiles of political parties, political banners and also vehicles displaying advertisements in any form, will be issued by the Governor. Only those officers assigned for that particular duty by Superintendent of Police Michael H. Crowley and his police head announced that all available members of the department will be pressed into service.

Commander Frank S. O'Donnell of the Veterans of Foreign Wars called upon all members of his organization to assemble at a point early in the parade to participate in the parade.

HURLEY TO SPEAK

The state commander in a notice to posts said:

"Because of the historical significance, the parade in observance of the 150th anniversary of the framing of the Constitution should have the united support of all veterans, particularly members of the V. F. W. who followed the flag to foreign soil in time of strife. We must show our keen interest in demonstrations of this kind."

Governor Hurley was invited today to speak over a nation wide broadcast sponsored by the United States Bicentennial Commission, of which Rep. Sol Bloom, of New York is director, to be held at 12:30 daylight saving time.

The governor will speak from the studios of station WBZ.

PONDERING END OF ROMANTIC HOPES AFTER COURT VISIT

Indignation seemed to ring in the voice of this former Roxbury singer, Miss Maria Fiore, as she told police a story of divorcing her husband, giving up her job and devoting herself, for two years, to Dr. Herbert N. Gerardell of Brookline, only to be arrested and charged with larceny, on his complaint. When the picture was made, Miss Fiore was being interviewed by a Boston Evening American reporter.

On the latter charge, he also was held. He accused Miss Fiore of stealing $700 from him. She told police it was her own money, although she allegedly admitted taking it from Gerardell's pocket.

By FRANK K. REILLY

Today's balloting in the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser mayoralty straw vote was featured by a bitter battle between School Committeeman Maurice J. Tobin and District Attorney William J. Foley for second place in the contest.

Former Governor James M. Curley was still definitely the leading contestant.

Foley received a tremendous vote in today's mail, while Tobin experienced the poorest day since the beginning of the balloting.

Former Representative Alfred Santosuosso of Hyde Park continued to receive substantial support and he held fourth place without difficulty.

DISPLACES NICHOLS

President John I. Fitzgerald of the Boston City Council, who has been actively increasing strength during the past several days, today went into fifth place as he outdistanced former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols.

Seventh place was held again today by Carleton L. Brett of Dorchester, the Social Justice candidate. Brett continued to receive strong support from members of that group.

Representative Francis X. Coyne of Dorchester received his first substantial vote today as a large number of ballots arrived from Dorchester.

It was evident from postmarks on envelopes containing votes today that his friends in Ward Roxbury are also active in his behalf.

District Attorney Foley continued to receive a heavy vote from Hyde Park. He topped the ticket there today with former Governor Curley receiving the second largest vote and former Representative Santosuosso running a strong third.

Santosuosso received the largest vote cast from East Boston today and he was trailed by former Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols in the Eddie Island tabulations. The combined vote of the other candidates totaled less than 50 per cent of the ballots arriving from that section today.

BLOOD O. VOTES

The officers of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser have not finished with the paper votes. Every mail brings additional ballots. As predicted at the beginning of the balloting, Boston's political pot has begun to boil in earnest.

All readers of these newspapers are urged to cast a vote for their favorite candidate. There is absolutely no favoritism and those now in the lead will have no advantage among the 13 contenders held those positions because of the interest taken in this competition by their friends.

The Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser inaugurated this ballot in order to enable their readers to join in a movement to determine who are the strongest candidates in the field and with a view to enlightening the many thousands of voters who are speculating as to whom Mayor Mansfield's successor will be.

The balloting is conducting without bias. It is open to all subscribers of these two papers.

Accurate daily reports will be made as to the progress of the balloting and the results of the 13 candidates who have not as yet declared will be announced, while beside the name of the man they think will be the next mayor of Boston are urged to do so at once.

BLACK DODGES REPLY ON KLAN

detail is that Governor Bibb Graves of Alabama, who recently appointed Mrs. Graves to the U. S. Senate to succeed Justice Black, became a life member of the Klan himself when Black at the same meeting at which Black pledged his sacred oath that he would uphold the Klan and its principles for life. According to further statements in the New York Times and other newspapers which have secured the rights to the North American Newspaper Alliance and Pittsburgh Post Gazette copyrighted exposé, Black, a native of a district of klansmen held in their meeting hall on South 20th street, Birmingham, Alabama, on September 4, 1926, were made of the raising of Governor Bibb and Justice Black to life membership.

The two men now in high official life grasped their right hands in a solemn oath. Grand passports good throughout the "invisible empire" were given them and the oath of Alexandre to the Klan "for as long as life shall last" was administered.

The minutes were made and transcribed by A. B. Hale, Klan reporter of Jefferson County, Alabama. Photostats and the minutes are published.

Simultaneously with the issuance of the new Copeland statement, United States Senator Prentiss Brown of Michigan, one of the senators who voted for the confirmation of Black, said he feels that in view of the new charges the matter will have to "be looked into." His statement, made at St. Ignace, Mich., was as follows:

"I never would have voted for Justice Black's confirmation as Supreme Court justice if I had thought he was a klansman. When I voted for Justice Black's confirmation I depended largely on the word of his colleague, Senator Bankhead of Alabama."

In Detroit, U. S. Senator Arthur Vandenberg, who voted against Black said:

"These charges show the error of the Senate Judiciary Committee in not holding public hearings on the appointment and also the error of the Senate in voting down an investigation of previous rumors. It is one more demonstration of the pell-mell snap judgment we have seen so much of in the Senate in the last five years."

Black, in London, Making 'No Statements'

London, Sept. 14 (INS)—Hugo L. Black, associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, flatly declined today to discuss reports that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan.

After repeated unsuccessful attempts had been made to reach Justice Black personally and by telephone, he gave out the following message through the manager of the hotel where he and Mrs. Black are stopping:

"I have made no statement of any kind to anyone, and I am not making any statements."

Walsh Urges Black Repudiate Klan

Members of Congress throughout Massachusetts joined national leaders in voicing their opinions today that Supreme Court Justice Hugo Black and President Roosevelt must solve the situation involving the Ku Klux charges made against Black between themselves.

Senator David I. Walsh believes that Justice Black should issue a public statement to relieve the President of any embarrassment.

Senator Copeland of New York, one of the leaders in the fight to prevent Senatorial confirmation of Black after his nomination to the Supreme Court by President Roosevelt, issued another statement against Black, the high point of which was that Black at the same meeting at which Black pledged his sacred oath that he would uphold the Klan and its principles for life. Continued from First Page inadequate and in fact unworthy.

BLACK was endorsed, in spite of widespread but smouldering and suppressed opposition, because he was a member of the Senate body and it was customary for the Senate to ratify immediately the appointment of any one of its members.

Why, forsooth?

The reason was purely selfish and mean.

It was in order that the senators voting may themselves be ratified whenever and if ever they, in their turn, shall be appointed to office.

No higher motive that that was the reason for Black's ratification.

It was perfectly well known that he was the personal servant of the President, the ignoble tool of the administration, doing its menial work.

IT was perfectly well known that he was not of judicial mind, but a violent and extreme partisan, a prosecuting attorney in record and type, appointed to the highest judicial position.

It was perfectly well known and frequently publicly stated that he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan, a racial and religious organization of utter bigotry and intolerance.

There was no excuse of public benefit in his appointment by the President or his ratification by the Senate.

The only advantage to be gained now out of the deplorable and humiliating situation which has resulted, is the confirmed conviction, the assured knowledge, that no President should ever have the power to debauch the Supreme Court, and no loyal hearted, clear-headed citizens and voters should ever permit the balance of power between the three co-equal branches of the American government to be unbalanced or in any way disturbed.

FREE Americans want their free government to continue.

They want no Fascist nor Communist despotism.

They want their liberty, they want their democracy, they want their personal independence.

They want government by the consent of the governed, and not an autocratic government ruling by personal prejudice and for personal aggrandisement.

The unfortunate results of un-American meddling with the American system of government should restore our faith in Americanism, our determination to preserve the American system as our fathers founded it.

Bancroft Girl To Become Bride

Santa Monica, Cal., Sept. 14 (AP)—Georgette Bancroft, 23-year-old daughter of George Bancroft, screen actor, and Hal (Cy King) Kanz, Minneapolis man, will be married here later this week, they said today.

Wife Convinced Doctor Innocent of Girl's Charge

Mrs. Herbert N. Gerardell, wife of the Brookline doctor accused by a young Roxbury singer of promising to marry her, will stand by her husband now she is firmly convinced of his innocence, she declared today.

Meanwhile, the girl, Miss Maria Fiore, 21, of Copeland street, who pleaded not guilty yesterday to a charge of larceny of $700 on complaint of Dr. Gerardell, remained firm in her assertions that he had promised to get a divorce to marry her.

She charged furthermore, that she did take the money from the doctor because he owed it to her. In Roxbury court she testified that she had invested the money for two years and pleaded guilty to a statutory charge.

Determined to stand by her husband, Mrs. Gerardell said today that the Fiore girl had been employed in their household as a maid for a year and had been discharged.

"The Fiore girl called me up last Saturday night saying she was ill and wanted my husband to meet her at a local restaurant. I told him about it and he went," she said.

"This is the first time I had ever heard any mention of a divorce between the doctor and myself," she added.

It was at Miss Fiore's home Saturday night that the doctor charged he was robbed of $700. Dr. Gerardell, it developed, testified that he had ever owed the girl money.

"When I woke up I found my wallet stuffed with strips of newspapers and the $700 gone. She was gone, too, but I finally located her in the hallway. I called the police, who found the money stuffed in a mattress.

"As for making any promises to marry her or to divorce my wife, that is absurd," he said. "I love my wife."

GUILD PICKETS BOO PRINTERS

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—About 200 men early today picketed the plant of the Brooklyn Daily Eagle, where a strike of editorial and commercial employes was voted yesterday by the Newspaper Guild unit.

Picketing was orderly, police said, except for booing of printers who passed through the lines into the building on instructions of their union.

Last night ten pickets were arrested on charges of disorderly conduct.

A representative of the management said no statement would be made for the present. It was reported unofficially, however, that it was planned to publish the paper as usual.

A PROCLAMATION

There comes a time in the life of every nation when its citizens must decide whether they shall be governed by the whims and caprices of men or by laws and principles which they hold to be fundamental to their existence and the existence of civilized mankind.

When this crisis confronted our forefathers, they chose unhesitatingly to govern themselves in accordance with those principles which would best insure them against the tyranny of an individual's will and power; and for eight years they fought with the valor, determination and zeal of men who would and did give their all for a magnificent principle.

Our Constitution in its words and in the history of its writing and ratification is the documentary crystallization of the great faith of a great people that there is no individual welfare without public welfare. That these principles were sound and consonant with the innermost aspirations of our nation is witnessed by the endurance of this our charter of civilized living.

Therefore, Whereas the Constitution of the United States was signed on September 17, 1787, and had by June 21, 1788, been ratified by the necessary number of States and,

Whereas, George Washington was inaugurated as the first President of the United States on April 30, 1789, Now, Therefore, I, Hurley, Governor of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, hereby designate Friday, September 17, 1937, as and call upon all our institutions of learning and public buildings to close at twelve o'clock midday; and request the co-operation of our private business, industrial and mercantile establishments to the end that our citizens may enjoy the greatest possible measure of enjoyment in the observance of this great day, and I further designate the period from September 17, 1937, to April 30, 1939, as one in which the citizens of this Commonwealth shall commemorate the ratification of the Constitution and of the inauguration of the first President under that Constitution.

I urge that this period be marked by fitting observances in our public schools and elsewhere, so that the significance of this period in our history may be made manifest to all our citizens.

CHARLES F. HURLEY

THREE ROOSEVELTS COURTED IN N. E.

President's Youngest Son May Have June Wedding Here

He's the President's son. She's the daughter of a wealthy and socially prominent Boston and North Shore family. But love—the great leveller—makes them kin today to every one of thousands and thousands of Boston Evening American readers. You only have to look at the smiling faces of John Roosevelt and Miss Anne Lindsay Clark to know that the happiness which is warming their hearts is exactly the same as that which is felt by young people, all over the world, as they plan their weddings and dream their dreams. Anne Lindsay Clarke's engagement ring (in insets with its three great diamonds) must have cost more than many a prospective bridegroom's yearly salary. But that isn't why she values it, as this picture proves. It's a picture of a boy and girl in love!

JOHN, ANNE "AWFULLY HAPPY"; ENGAGED SINCE SPRING

By BETTY DiPESA

The last of the single Roosevelts is committed.

And the slender, blonde bride John will lead to the altar, sometime next June, is Anne Lindsay Clark, eldest daughter of Mrs. H. Haven Clark of Boston and Nahant.

Today they have stolen away to themselves the spotlight once held by elder brother Franklin, Jr., and his bride-to-be, the former Ethel du Pont.

While Franklin and Ethel honeymooned somewhere in Florida after a trip to Europe, temporarily sheltered by its owners and more sedate romance, that soon had announced in the Presidential family, John and Anne are as sixths some about it as prep-school kids on their first date.

"AWFULLY HAPPY"

That isn't exactly betrayed their elected secrets about each other, planning their wedding, talking about their future, nor the breathtaking ecstatic quality of any engaged romance.

"We're awfully happy," confessed Anne.

"I guess that's not very original, but it is what all young brides are supposed to say, isn't it? Well, we are."

If the bridegroom exhibited a little more, well—pardon us—reserve, he did so as a bridegroom should. There's a little local love story of Franklin, Jr., and Ethel that has been a foundation for many of the romances of the younger Roosevelts, so much so that that has been very private.

OTHER ROMANCES

Anne and John Ethel and Franklin, Jr., Curtis Cutting and James Roosevelt.

Jimmy Roosevelt—son of Mrs. Betsy Cushing, a descendant of 1625-26 daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Howard Cushing of Brookline—is the only one of Franklin's children to be born in the White House, on Dec. 23, 1916.

"I don't remember when we met, or how," said Miss Ingalls, a three-stone engagement ring as she tried to appear grave.

MET 3 YEARS AGO

"It was the year before I came out. About three years ago. It may have been one of the Friday evenings. I'm sure I can't remember now."

They were engaged during the splendor of Franklin's wedding at the du Pont estate in Delaware, continually revelling in the rites of that super bridal, while all other matters regarding didn't exist.

And at the time John was almost having busted things started about squirting ink pellets in the French manner at Canoe. Anne rode and swam on the North Shore, waiting for him to come back.

"I just began wearing his ring today, despite reports to the contrary," Anne said.

"I've had it for weeks though and used to peek at it every day," she slyly confessed.

"We decided to keep our engagement secret until John returned from his European trip—we've been engaged since last spring."

Friends of the young pair had expected the engagement announcement for some time, when it was learned the latter part of June that the Harvard polo team would go to Newport and John would be one of the Harry Payne's guests and during their delightful house party there would be a number of affairs given in honor of the visiting Harvard team and one of them announcement of the engagement was to be made.

Anne is but 5 inches—19 inches shorter than John, who is 6 feet.

When they are married she will be second youngest Roosevelt daughter-in-law. Franklin, Jr., after attending Harvard a number of years, married Barbara Cushing, daughter of Dr. Harvey Cushing, famous surgeon of Boston's Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

'Miss America, '37,' to Parade to Tune of Village Band

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

International News Service Special Correspondent

Marblehead, Mass., Sept. 14—Miss America is going to see what the American film boardwalk missed.

The town from which she sprang out to get a glimpse of 20 years ago Betty Cloonan, who after winning the Miss America 1927 title, married the grandson of the Bristol City for the little village where she was born.

This little country town of 5000 persons was in a dither today because Betty has promised to march in a parade with the village band trotting behind her—and she's going to wear the very same gown she wore when she was crowned the beauty queen of America.

The parade, and a banquet and reception, will be held Friday, attended by state and local dignitaries. The procession will march from the high school through the town square where they will have a reviewing stand and everything.

While Mr. Hasselstrom was hurrying with bridegroom's glamour girl in its midst, Betty was sitting up in bed recovering from a cold.

$58,000 BET FUND CASH TRACED AT HEARING

the small hearing room were also filled with curious onlookers.

Before the meeting began, Raymond J. McMahon, counsel for the stockholders of the track association, asked that Francis J. Kiernan, chief of the racing board, be disqualified or that he disqualify himself to sit in at the hearing on grounds of bias and that he preside over the case.

HELD IN ABEYANCE

The matter was held in abeyance and the hearing proceeded pending a ruling thereon.

Boles, in his testimony, said he was a California trainer and that at 4:30 on the morning of September 4, the Saturday before Labor Day, O'Hara and Bobby Curran, O'Hara's trainer, drove up to his stables.

He said O'Hara asked his name which he gave, and Boles declared that he told the racing baron that he was training horses for California parties.

QUOTES O'HARA

He quoted O'Hara as saying:

"You're a thief. You stole the track. You get out of here at once."

After O'Hara instructed Curran to see that he "get out," Boles said, O'Hara's trainer then told him:

"You get to —— out of here. If you don't I'll cut your head off and kick it out."

Eddie Tucker, a jockey under contract to Boles and a groom, who were witnesses to the conversation between O'Hara, Curran and Boles, testified and corroborated Boles' testimony.

KIERNAN OPENS MEETING

The hearing opened at 10:52 a. m. and only two newspapermen were admitted, one reporting for a Providence newspapers, one representing the Press service and two the Boston Herald and Evening American papers.

Seated beside Attorney General Hartigan was Assistant Attorney General Thomas H. Dolan and Lieutenant-Governor Raymond E. Jordan, attorneys Laurence A. and Edward T. Sheehy were present on behalf of O'Hara.

When the hearing was called to order by Kiernan at 11:35 the first business of the day was McMahon's motion that Kiernan be disqualified as a member of the racing division in this case.

McMahon also declared that the commission, by a vote of 3 to 2 voted to oust O'Hara as a stockholder of the racing association. Kiernan said he sought to take this action. He stated that according to statute the chairman, Hartigan was the one to make the motion.

Because of the 2 to 2 vote McMahon said Kiernan's vote was the deciding factor in the matter action at that time.

Persons who have observed the efforts to settle the political battle centered about Narragansett Park began to form the opinion that unless O'Hara retains the commissioners will close the track.

It was pointed out that in six charges brought against the racing association and O'Hara the commission has a sound legal basis and under the law can revoke the license for cause "which it deems sufficient."

Meanwhile, the track czar remained with his advisers in a downtown hotel. It was reported adamant in the face of stockholders' plans that he resign and save the track, which still has four days left to its present meeting.

He was said to have convinced the stockholders, who banded together in an effort to protect their financial investment, that their interests will be satisfied through the projected court action.

At the same time, according to a person close to him, O'Hara issued a vehement denial that his wife, Ida, had importuned the governor not to oust her husband.

SCOFFS AT PHONE STORY

Told of the rumored telephone plea, O'Hara reportedly shouted:

"If Mrs. O'Hara called Governor Quinn I'll give him the track!"

According to State House sources, a woman who said she was the turfman's wife late yesterday called the governor's office and said she wanted to ask Quinn's indulgence to the matter.

She was not allowed to speak to the executive, who had made up his mind to ask and give no quarter, it was said.

Governor Quinn would not confirm the rumor and Mrs. O'Hara could not be reached last night for her comment.

Meanwhile, it was reported, O'Hara and the stockholding group had engaged at a long, drag-out battle in a suite at the Biltmore Hotel and that the minority interest group had backed down before O'Hara's determined stand, swinging over to his support.

Sources close to the bellicose trackman, however, denied that such a meeting took place.

They said O'Hara had gone to the hotel to confer with a group of Italian political leaders about the erection of a monument to Marconi, late Italian radio wizard. O'Hara was reported to be a large contributor to the project in an effort to gain control of Italian votes in Rhode Island.

Meanwhile, the full text of the Supreme Court decision, which quashed another charge against the racing association on grounds it was inadequate, was studied by both sides after its release late yesterday.

O'Hara's allies said the decision might be used by Laurence and Edward Hogan, chief of his legal staff, to argue that they had in sufficient time to prepare their case because of its late appearance.

stantly expressed by the racing czar during the entire bitter battle of nerves that culminated today in a full-page advertisement in his newspaper, the Providence Star-Tribune, bearing the announcement of the fall meeting at the park.

Besides the misappropriation count, the five other charges which may be instrumental in throwing them out of work are: (1) The Narragansett Racing Association blocked an authorized state audit of its books; (2) The secretary of the racing commission was refused admission to the track; (3) O'Hara said he could buy Kiernan for $1,50; (4) Persons who created disturbances at the track were allowed to frequent it by the association; (5) O'Hara called the governor "a —— liar" and called other high state officials "foul, abusive and slanderous names."

We join heartily in welcoming the American Legion, which opens its 19th annual convention and reunion in New York City on Sept. 20. We hope and trust that a good time is had by all.

Anywhere from 250,000 to 500,000 delegates, and what comes with them, are expected, and it is estimated that they will spend upwards of $25,000,000 while in the big city. This is very nice news, indeed. We can all use a little fresh money here in Gotham.

It is announced in the public prints that a picked group of 500 American Legion men has been formed to counsel Legion members "in the moments of exuberance that may be expected during the five days of the convention."

It is stated that the men who constitute the group will in no sense perform the duties or assume the attitude of the military police of the World War days, but they will be on duty in night clubs and similar places of entertainment in cooperation with the management and will offer suggestions to such legion members as seem to be in need of a suggestion or two.

It sounded like a good idea until we investigated the personnel of the group. We find that the members have been selected from every state because of their reputations in their communities, and because they are acquainted with New York city, but we doubt that they will prove entirely adequate as an aid to the committee under all the conditions that may arise in moments of exuberance.

We think the group should include men like Mr. Alphonse Wesson Wee, Mr. Samuel McQuade, Mr. Antonio Martello, Mr. William Anderson, Mr. Thomas McArdle, and Mr. Jonathan Ariel. These gentlemen are professional matchmakers in the great city of New York.

It is their peculiar function to pair off, on terms of fairness and equality, and with due consideration to weight, height, experience, style and even age, the disciples of Thespis, more familiarly known as tragedy.

They have a profound knowledge of who ought to tick whom. It is a business, and a study with them.

They are loyal American citizens and some of them probably American legionnaires themselves, and we have no doubt they would gladly give their time to the Legion group during the period of the convention, to prevent the lads in moments of exuberance" from making bad matches, especially around the night clubs and similar places of entertainment, where bad matches for strangers abound.

MATCHES DECEPTIVE

For instance, suppose Mr. Antonio Martello came upon a middle-aged gentleman in "a moment of exuberance," and an overseas cap slightly askew, choosing a placid looking and somewhat portly gentleman in a doorman's uniform outside a night club.

On the face of it, and in the opinion of an inexperienced group member, it might appear that the middle-aged gentleman in the overseas cap was making a fair match for himself.

But here is where Mr. Antonio Martello would step in, and out of his years of matchmaking experience and knowledge, would explain to the middle-aged gentleman:

"Desist, pal. You are overmatching yourself. That's old Sailor Grande, who fought Harry Wills, and all the boys. He can still punch like sixty."

However we are inclined to the belief that the Legion continues shrinking of its members in terms of, say, ten to 15 years back, rather than as they are today, when it appoints advice committees to guide the lads in "moments of exuberance."

These moments, for most of the legionnaires, have gone with the years. When a man acquires rheumatic knees, gray hair, spectacles, indigestion, business troubles and a wife and children, his moments of exuberance become increasingly scarce.

YEARS PILING UP

The average age of the legionnaires is placed at 44 years. Uncle Willie Corum, the sports writer, who was the youngest major in all the A. E. F., is probably some years younger than that, but we notice of late that even Uncle Willie Corum would rather put in five hours of quietude in a comfortable chair than one minute in exuberance.

To our knowledge this will be Dorothy's first appearance with an American professional opera company so this engagement culminates a crowded career of preparation and study . . . After taking singing parts in a number of Junior League productions, Miss Cornish took up the serious study of music and worked under the famous Madame Bianco in Rome for four consecutive summers . . . Each winter she continued her studies in Boston . . .

In August, 1932, just about five years ago, she made her operatic debut in the difficult contralto role of Maddelena in "Rigoletto" in Sienna, Italy . . . which, though a small cathedral town, is one of the musical centers of opera loving Italy . . .

Last summer, when Miss Cornish was visiting friends on the West Coast she met a Mr. Merrill, one of the directors of the San Francisco Opera Company . . . She sang for him and this past June was gratified when he requested that she return to the Coast and join the company for their season this autumn, which opens October 27 . . . A great many of the leading artists of the Metropolitan Opera appear in the San Francisco productions . . . Miss Cornish will make her debut singing the role of Suzuki in "Madame Butterfly" and she will also appear again as Maddelena, as well as the nurse to Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet" . . .

Her sister, Priscilla Cornish, is leaving Boston this coming Sunday to join her sister in San Francisco and be with her for the momentous occasion of her American operatic debut . . . The opera season on the Coast is rather short so the girls expect to return to Boston by Thanksgiving time, and surely by Christmas.

Mr. Collens is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Collens of Oak Hill Village and Cataumet . . . His first wife was the late Eleanor Perkins Collens, whose death a year ago this summer left a gap in the ranks of vivacious Junior Leaguers and Vincent Club members who take the most active interest in the affairs of the organizations . . . She was a talented little dancer and a prima donna in many a Vincent show . . .

Mrs. Arsène de Rosset Lloyd and Louise Howe are going to put the knowledge of fashions which they gained from modelling in innumerable fashion shows during their debutante years, to good account. As soon as Mrs. Vincent Lamb opens the gown shop which we mentioned a few days ago that she is planning . . . Arkie and Louise, who was maid of honor at Arkie's wedding in January, 1936, are hoping to carve themselves a niche in the business world by selling gowns to Boston debs and their collegiate sisters at Radcliffe . . . the shop will be in Cambridge . . . Mrs. Lloyd is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick N. de Rosset of Brookline and Miss Howe the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Owen Howe . . .

One of the gayest debutante parties scheduled for early October is the dinner dance which Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cabot of Jamaica Plain are giving at the Hoffbrau House for Phebe Fitz, Marjorie Prince, Susan Storey and Faith Richardson . . . Buttermilk Facial Buttermilk facial! Healthy and sane and inexpensive! A facial never forgotten that made pearly-skin beauties of our Mother's Mother.

It has always proven effective against blackheads, clogged pores and discolorations due to faulty circulation, for it brings the acid waste to the surface—ready to be washed away and leaves the skin clear and free to function normally.

If you have allowed your skin to become rough and blotchy, and you doubt if it will ever be translucent again—thank heaven for modern methods that have given a buttermilk facial to us in concentrated powder form. Use it weekly or bi-weekly to restore that clear skin to fresh, colorful elasticity.

Four cents a treatment, comes in a package of twelve treatments—a whole facial can be managed in five minutes' time.

To learn the name of this concentrating home facial treatment and where it may be purchased, write to to Arline Gould in care of this newspaper, self-addressed envelope or telephone her at Liberty 4000.

Almost Lost Her Good Husband by Crying, Reader Confesses

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A correspondent, happily married, writes me an interesting letter which she calls "The Man's Side," and she does not spare herself in giving "The Man's Side" of her marriage.

Here's her letter:

"DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

"I have a wonderful husband, much more wonderful than I deserve. Our marriage was probably the most hectic imaginable. Something was always happening; a continuous three-ring circus, but never a dull moment.

"I'm a very temperamental person, dramatically inclined, and I do make mountains out of mole hills. My husband is not demonstrative, I am, and that is the source of many arguments. If he fails to notice me or kiss me goodbye or say 'hello' I brood.

"And how I brood! I work myself into a 'poor me' attitude to prepare myself for the onslaught when Mark returns. Sympathy could come from no work.

IT WAS TOO MUCH!

"Poor Mark! He has stood it time and time again, while I let my uncontrollable temper send me into tantrums and hysterical spells. He has stood it with a kind tolerance which was natural to him. But too much proved to be too much.

"Let me see—what did he do the day that brought about the reckoning? Oh, yes; he called me on the telephone to ask if it would be all right for him to go to supper with his boss. When he asked me if I had supper prepared, I said 'yes.'

"This was a lie. It was only what was left from dinner. But with a note of self-sacrifice in my voice I told him to go ahead and have supper with his boss.

"He answered he would gladly come home if I preferred. 'No.' I insisted wearily, 'go with your boss.' Despite my protests, he came home first. I treated him coldly. He dressed and left. When he returned home, I was in my most depressed mood, and I turned on the tears with gusto.

"I waited for the kind and sympathetic words, but they didn't come. The harder I cried, the redder my husband's face got. I was beginning to fear, not only for my vicity, but for some desperate explosion on his part.

"But try as I would, I couldn't stop crying now. When he shouted: 'What are you crying about?' I couldn't give him an answer.

AWOKE IN TIME

"'What was I crying about?' I ha,' good husband who treated me well. I had plenty to eat and a good roof over my head, and I was his 'perfect' health. What was I crying about? I finally gave up in despair. I wasn't crying about anything. I was just crying.

"I nearly lost my husband that time, lost Mark, my cherished home, everything which is symbolic of my happiness. I ALMOST lost, but thank God, I did not. I've not spared myself in this telling. Because I want women to see the man's side of marriage.

"MRS. B. C. T."

DEAR READERS:

Let's have more of these confessions from wives—and from husbands, too. Such honest statements, they're highly interesting, and others may find a lesson in them.

NO RING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We're both very much in love, but he told me we'd have to wait two years before we got married. We've been engaged for a year, and have been engaged for the past year. I get very lonesome, and look forward to another year's separation with anything but good grace. I'm 20 and he's 21.

I haven't the pride to ask him to marry me now. He wants to wait till he has a home built and money saved.

At present he's putting all his money into a new financial venture, and I realize he's short of funds.

But I want to help him in developing his business, and would enjoy working with him.

Also, he hasn't mentioned an engagement ring lately.

DOUBTFUL.

DEAR CHILD:

If you've been engaged to this young man for a year it would not be stepping outside the bounds of good taste for you to tell him you would enjoy working with him and hoping him on this new venture.

Also, you might suggest you could make better use of money if you had a little home of your own than living around in apartments as you are.

I'll be glad to send you your budget if have worked out for me at $25.00 a week.

It can be pared down to less for two people.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

ADHERE TO EXERCISE RULES

By IDA JEAN KAIN

IF you're going to exercise—and you are, of course—you might as well get something out of it.

The first exercise rule is: Don't start unless you intend to keep at it!

In reviving your curves, regularity in exercise is the chief essential. Every other day you can make an improvement in your figure, but it must be every day. Five minutes a day is 35 bouts in a year. You are more likely to keep on with your exercise if you're not too ambitious.

You should never exercise immediately after meals. Wait an hour or two so as not to interfere with digestion. Neither should you take vigorous exercise before retiring, as it may be too stimulating.

Your age determines the type of exercise you should take. This means your physiological, not your chronological age. See your doctor for a checkover before taking even a single exercise.

Wear next to nothing when you exercise. Shorts or a bathing suit are first in order.

To be effective, exercise must be taken on a surface which adds to the work of the body. Not only does a soft surface fail to offer any resistance to your bulges, but the spine assumes fairly posture while exercising in a prone position on a soft surface.

Before you jump into a strenuous exercise program, be prepared to follow these fundamental rules.

Go into your exercise program by sending for the leaflet "General Exercises to Make You Trim and fit as a fiddle." This leaflet contains splendid exercise for the beginner. Write to Ida Jean Kain, enclosing a stamped return envelope.

Self-Made Girl

By Hazel Livingstone

What Has Happened

Linda Perry, youngest of the five poverty-stricken Perrys, lives with her family in a small frame house in the country near Philadelphia. Because she is the youngest and prettiest, Linda is spoiled by relatives.

Ignorant of social distinctions and the heartaches they will cause later, Linda is completely happy in school with her three best friends—Constance, old Senator Scott's granddaughter; Ruth Wagner, daughter of the local doctor, and Thelma, whose father is the chauffeur of another wealthy family in the neighborhood.

Now Continue:

CHAPTER TWO

Sometimes when the two older girls came home to visit, they looked at this, their little sister, so like them, yet so unlike them, with something that was close to antagonism.

Claudine, whose black hair was thin and lustreless, whose white teeth were broken from neglect, would listen to the talk of Linda's teeth-straightening, Linda's dancing lessons, and think resentfully.

I never had any of that! And when my kids are ready for it, how am I going to manage it on Chester's $30 a week?

I won't have the whole family helping me bring them up, the way Mama has them all helping her spoil Linda!

Even Blanche, happy and proud of her position in the big University hospital in Philadelphia, looked wistfully, even resentfully, at her blue-eyed, black-haired little sister, arm-in-arm with Senator Scott's granddaughter, and thought of her own childhood in a small five-trap of a cottage in the city.

Well, poor papa's useless and moving pictures hadn't spoiled Linda ally harm, even if it had come too late to do herself and the other children any good.

The four children, the Scotts' Constance, Dr. Wagner's Ruth, Thelma Connell, the chauffeur's daughter, and Linda, belonged to "a secret society," a very secret sisterhood which they called the T. J. F.

The secret, which each had sworn to die rather than divulge, was the meaning of the letters, which stood for The Jolly Four.

They met after school every day. Usually at the Scotts, because that was the best place to play. It was by far the largest, and it had its own swimming pool.

The Wagners' house was the most popular because it had several acres of orchard and field and the immense attic above the third were known as "the playroom." Grandma Perry's "well filled" cookie jar, and a certain trunk full of old dresses with which she let them amuse themselves, made Linda's house popular too.

But by mutual consent they stayed away from Thelma's, a bleak-looking cottage in an unkempt yard just off the main street.

Thelma, who was a quiet, self-effacing child with large dark eyes and pale golden hair, had three rough brothers and nobody liked Mrs. Connell, a fat, slatternly looking woman with a shrill nasal voice.

It seemed to the four of them, the T. J. F.'s, that their lives would run on together always. They were inseparable.

Their connected voice had its ways.

Days, they agreed, were necessarily as partners, and would of course have to be tolerated, even cherished, later on.

To Linda, light-hearted, spoiled, and shielded from all the realities by a sentimental, doting household the end, when it came, was an utterly shocking one.

MOTHER OBJECTS

They had finished grammar school and were being driven each morning now to the ninth school, a Union building several miles distant.

Days when a bus to pick them up, but the Scotts' chauffeur, Clem, nearly always drove them unless he couldn't, there was Dr. Wagner's handy man, old Tom, to do it.

Thelma, still balking if inkling it was, came on the days when the driving fell to Tom. When he, with Constance and Ruth in the back seat, stopped in front of the Perrys' house, there was never any Thelma.

Oh, she went on ahead, in the bus, Tom would say.

And that would be that.

Finally Ruth, forced to divulge the truth to her "blood sisters," because T. J. F. admitted through tears that her mother wouldn't let her go with Thelma any more, "because I go with Thelma." Why NOT?

"What's the matter with Thelma?"

"Oh, don't be mad at me. I can't help it. It's mama. It's on account of Mrs. Connell and the whole family. She says that girls like me oughtn't to want to go with a girl like Thelma. Oh, don't be mad—please!" It isn't MY fault that I'm not!"

Constance and Linda were furious. What did Mrs. Wagner think she was doing? Who did she think she was anyway, and if she thought she could keep them from their own friendships and T. J. F. Thelma Connell, she was mistaken.

NEVER THE SAME

For two mornings, when the Scott car was not available, the rebels waited together on the verandah for the bus. They waited, with triumphant and Boston-tea-partish independence for Thelma, and the only thing to spoil their pleasure in refusing Mrs. Wagner's lift was Ruth's redrimmed eyes.

Nothing was quite the same after that. Everything was spoiled for Thelma. She became shy, suspicious, stand-offish, even with her own T. J. F.

Naturally she wouldn't drop in at the Wagners any more, and she began to stay away from the Scotts' too.

And as Thelma became more and more self-effacing, Ruth became more aggressive. She was always angling to get Constance alone.

"Come on, Connie," she'd cry. "Come on! I got something to tell you" and she'd put an arm around Constance and drag her away from the other girls.

Just what brought it all to a head, Linda never knew, but it dated from a call that Mrs. Wagner made on Mrs. Scott.

Indifferent as she was to the affairs of her elders, Linda did know that "Mrs. Doctor Wagner," who was the leader in church and lodge affairs in the town, had no social contact with the Scotts whose friends came from the city, and from other large estates around the county.

"NOBODY AT ALL"

It wasn't like Mrs. Wagner to call, in her best brown wash-silk, on languid, indifferent Mrs. Scott. You just couldn't picture plump, tightly laced, neat Mrs. Wagner, with her red face and her shiny eye-glasses, sitting on the Scotts' terrace, in one of their long, low chairs.

You couldn't imagine Mrs. Scott saying what Mrs. Wagner said, either.

It was just the same it was right after that that Constance was sent away to a school in the South.

Ruth began to go with a new girl, and Linda, who had been a reader, one of the elect for so long, found that almost over night she was nobody at all.

Fall Fashions for Younger Set

By ANNICE BRINK

Fashion Editor

THINGS aren't what they used to be in children's fashions . . . what with black party frocks coming in (a Victorian revival) and the junior miss stepping out with a fur hem border on her best coat, retrieved from the ultra-sophisticated Paris fashions for her elders.

Perhaps the biggest single fashion splash, however, is the clan plaid!

You never saw so many, so ingeniously handled. All the way from raincape-and-hat sets to book-bags out of true kilt-cloth!

Dark wash frocks are a help, from the laundering standpoint, for early fall school days.

Taffeta is the all-favorite party-frock material.

Among the stars for school and play that we feature today is a serge sailor suit that will send the youngest man off to kindergarten smiling. It has the earliest possible set of "longies," very tarlike, and a matching set of shorties.

Little prints are choice for sub-sub-sub debs. Their colorings are distinctive, and they wear so well!

Setting her off early in her career as a charmer is the ankle-length party dress. There are several very cunning styles in these long dresses and the shop whom to turn for dress-up or more flower girls than they can recall!

FOR SHOPPING INFORMATION on any children's fashion's illustrated, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, week-days until five, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

THE SAILOR rolling a hoop is all done up in navy serge, with plenty of white braid, and illustrated is the set of matching shorts. Complete, around two dollars.

UPPER right, the belle of the lower form goes all in velvet, trimmed with squirrel if it's sapphire blue or wine, with ermine if it's black! Set includes coat, hat and leggings, distinctly Princess Elizabeth. Set, around thirty.

LOWEST left, ankle-length party frock of celanese taffeta, in which she might rustle down the aisle as flower girl! Cunning bolero, and the whole thing is around five dollars!

BIG SISTER, next in line, is proud of her wool frock with flattering treatment of the plaid. Around ten dollars.

DEANNA DURBIN wore the original of this wool skirt with a zippered leather patch pocket on the hip. Around three dollars. Plaid sweater.

RIGHT, dirndl frock, Liberty print copy with matching panties. Around three dollars.

Feminine Tea With All the Frills

Trick Sandwich Recipes

By MARTHA LEE

FRIENDS and acquaintances returning from summer vacations means renewing social activities.

Bridge clubs meet again and clubs convene for the opening of the fall season.

Perhaps many of you are making plans for these events but are unable to think clearly in this direction because of brains still crowded with memories of summer happenings.

What could be a more appropriate and easy means of welcoming the fall season than a tea? An informal tea will give all an opportunity to discuss the events of the summer renew acquaintances, and introduce newcomers to the group.

What fun it is to let yourself go on a spree of making the tiniest, most feminine sandwiches imaginable. Enhance your sandwich tray further with a selection of large, luscious, ripe olives and other relish "frills."

Raisin bread canapes are smart for the tea table and are easily made. Sieved or creamy cheese, chopped ripe olives minced ham, or Prince fish, chopped and pickles blend beautifully with the raisin bread foundation.

STUFFED celery hearts are always a favorite accompaniment and lend color contrast to the whole ripe olives and red radishes. Radishes may be either sashed or cut to give a flower effect.

Some of the fillings and toppings you may improvise as you go—but for rare flavor harmony you'll want a few tried and true recipes.

The following recipe makes sandwiches dainty, petite and piquant in flavor. The raisin bread mentioned in the recipe is an essential flavor ingredient—and you know already that raisin bread has a seemingly magic way of flavoring meat and fresh ingredients.

RAISIN BREAD LADY SANDWICHES

1 cucumber
Raisin bread
Lemon butter
1 small can anchovy fillets
1 canned green chili pepper

Peel cucumber and cut into thin slices lengthwise. Cut each slice with lady finger cookie cutter. Cut thin slices of raisin bread with same cutter and spread with lemon butter. Place cucumber slices on buttered raisin bread fingers, and top each with an anchovy fillet and a strip of green pepper.

Makes about one dozen finger sandwiches.

Any of the spreads following may be used for either a closed or "open face" sandwich. Cream cheese or cream cheese spreads are delightful around edges of fancy sandwiches with a pastry bag and tube.

As garnish for one sliced white or yolk of egg, sprigs of watercress or parsley, slices of cucumber pickle, ripe olives, strips of pimento and green pepper etc.

SPICY HAM FILLING

1 cup ground cooked ham.
½ cup chopped pickle.
½ cup chopped olives.
1 tablespoon chopped parsley.
1 tablespoon chopped onion.
1 tablespoon chopped pimento.
2 teaspoons brown sugar.
½ teaspoon mustard.
Mayonnaise.

Mix ham with other ingredients. Add enough mayonnaise to moisten. May be used as a sandwich filling or a canape spread.

MUSTARD BUTTER

Plain mustard butter is made by creaming 1 cup of creamed butter with 2 tablespoons of prepared mustard.

This plain mustard butter may be used on sandwiches and canapes instead of butter, to give a piquant flavor. When used alone as a sandwich filling, any one of the following ingredients may be added:

1 cup chopped parsley, lettuce, celery or water cress leaves.
2 cups chopped cooked liver
1 cup chopped green olives
2 tablespoons pimientos, chopped
1 cup minced tongue

* * *

MARINATE fish fillets or steaks with lemon juice after cleaning. Let stand in refrigerator until ready for use and the lemon will impart delicate flavor.

Bridge

Preventing an Unblock

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It goes without saying that in the vast majority of hands we must bend every effort toward the preservation of high cards.

Sometimes, however, our efforts must be directed along diametrically opposite lines, namely, to get rid of these high cards.

The struggle of East and the declarer, in the hand shown below, led to amusing side. East sought frantically to avoid taking a trick. Declarer, after the fashion of the Algonac-Gaston school of long ago, politely insisted upon East's taking what was coming to him.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

West opened the spade Queen. East properly played the King to unblock, and when the declarer declared, the spade Ace continued. Declarer declared again. West won, and continued with a third round. Declarer's next logical problem was how to keep West off lead. But the actual solution of the problem took considerable ingenuity.

Declarer had in eight one-spade, two high heart tricks and two high clubs. The total of six tricks might be augmented in several different ways. He could establish diamond tricks, might return four additional diamonds, hoping that East would discover that the diamonds would be as favorably that declarer could win the trick in the hand.

The greatest chance for the ninth trick appeared to be establishment of the additional long heart in dummy if it could be done without letting West on lead. Declarer proceeded as follows:

He led a low diamond and finessed dummy's ten-spot. East won. May be used as a sandwich filling or a canape spread.

3 Men to Test Star Prospects

ton Quest, is here to make arrangements for the screen tests which will be given the most promising contestants.

ONLY 5 MORE DAYS

No applications will be accepted after the 19th—which is only five days away.

Because Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is actually striving to find real screen possibilities in New England, it will do all in its power to assist in proving your capabilities.

If you impress the talent scouts having charm, personality, intelligence and ability, you will be given a screen test in Boston by a staff of expert motion picture technicians. The test crew consists of seven men including Hesser Mc-Cartney himself; Charles David, the head cameraman; Steve Jones, second man; Phil Green, assistant director, and Arthur Jones, chief electrician.

SHOWN ON SCREEN

After the tests have been developed by the M-G-M laboratory, you will be able to see and hear just as you regulate on the screen, and a few of the screen tests will be shown on the screen at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters. That, indeed, should be quite an occasion in the lives of Boston movie-goers.

During the eliminations, Al Altar, eastern talent director for M-G-M will come to Boston to aid in making the final selection.

And then, whoever is selected will leave for Hollywood, sometime around the 11th of October. We have said before that you would leave on the 4th—but that date has been advanced in order to give the talent scouts more time to make and study the screen tests.

HEAD FOR STARDOM

Anyway, you tell you are considered to be a potential star, will leave for Hollywood with a months contract awaiting you at M-G-M where you will actually play a role in a major production. You will receive a salary of $75 a week—plus all your expenses. And if you have any real talents to offer to motion pictures, everything will be done to develop that talent. You may remain in Hollywood, with a new contract and the chance of becoming a new star.

The trip to Hollywood will undoubtedly be a memorable experience, for you will travel via one of those immense and luxurious sleeper planes—an American Airlines Flagship. It leaves Boston at 8:30 in the evening and arrives in Los Angeles at 9:30 the following afternoon. You will, of course, travel alone, for M-G-M has made arrangements for chaperonage.

MANY INTERVIEWS

Between now and next Sunday (the point the talent scouts will give numerous personal interviews to entrants, and those interviews will continue up until the 26th of September, when the screen tests begin. But no interviews will be given to anyone whose application does not arrive by the 19th.

Should you be called for a screen test and are away at school, you may have your test taken on a Saturday so that it will not interfere with your school work.

Incidentally, you may send as many different types of poses as you like—but please try to remember to write your name and address on the back of each photograph.

Children to Name B. & M. 'Locos'

Recapturing the old-time romance of the railroads, the Boston & Maine will name 20 of its newest and largest locomotives—and the names will be suggested by New England school children—officials of the road announced today.

Not only will the name given the locomotive be painted on its sides, but the engine itself will carry the name of the child suggesting it as well as the name of the school he or she attends.

Pupils, up to and including the final year of junior high school, may mail their name suggestions to the Boston & Maine Railroad general offices, North Station, or hand their suggestions direct to any station agent or train service employe.

Names chosen by the judges will be announced on November 1.

N. Y. CITY 'BANKRUPT,' AL SMITH CHARGES

New York, Sept. 14 (AP)—The charge that a "bankrupt" government today is driving business firms from New York City by excessive taxation was voiced by former Governor Alfred E. Smith in a campaign address for a Tammany mayoralty nominee.

The "happy warrior" of another political day took the stump last night in behalf of his personal friend, Senator Royal S. Copeland, candidate in both the Democratic and Republican primaries Thursday.

Carrying the burden of oratory in the last lap of the three-cornered race, Smith assailed rising city taxes and praised Copeland as the only candidate who could defeat the "Hippodrome artist in the City Hall." He did not refer to Mayor Fiorello La Guardia by name.

"The government is bankrupt and hasn't got a cent," he asserted. "It can't meet even the interest unless it can reach into the pocketbooks of everybody."

Police estimated 2000 persons heard the speech in the Brooklyn Academy of Music. The hall has a seating capacity of 2900.

Smith will close the Copeland campaign with a speech Wednesday night, in which it was announced he would discuss the Ku Klux Klan controversy.

Here is one of the pleasures the winner of the Great New England film talent quest will experience in a luxurious compartment aboard American Airline's famous transcontinental sky-sleeper plane—viewing the world from a height of several thousands of feet. Boarding the "American Mercury" in Boston at 8:30 p. m., the winner will arrive in Los Angeles about noon of the next day where fame may be waiting just around the corner in Hollywood.

MAN SHOT DEAD AS OFFICERS STAND BY

Methuen, Sept. 14—With two heavily-armed policemen a few feet away, a 32-year-old Lawrence man was shot to death here early today following a five-mile automobile chase across the state line from Salem, N. H.

The victim was Leo LeMay, 22, a Lawrence bartender.

Police said he was killed by a shotgun blast fired by George Rio-pelle, 38, countryman of a Salem, N. H. night club.

Riopelle was arrested on a manslaughter charge and was subsequently released in $5000 bail.

2 OTHERS HELD

Also arrested were two men who were alleged companions of LeMay in the racing auto pursued by Police Lt. Joseph Hall after an altercation in Riopelle's restaurant.

George A. Tate, 36, of Nesmith street, Lawrence, was held in $2000 as a fugitive from justice.

Charles M. Waterman, 39, of Summit street, Methuen, was held in the same bail, charged with drunkenness and with being a fugitive from justice.

Friends of Tate and Waterman later posted necessary bonds and were released.

RIOPELLE'S STORY

According to Riopelle's story, as told to Methuen police, LeMay and another man entered Riopelle's lunch car, brandished a gun and threatened him.

He ducked out a back door, he said, returned to the kitchen, then gave chase as LeMay and the other man sped in their automobile north-ward toward the Massachusetts line.

Riopelle's car overtook the other after the latter had been halted in Methuen by police, who had been warned of the chase by telephone.

Before the officers could question LeMay and his companions, Riopelle regarded Fred, fatally wounding LeMay.

"DIDN'T SEE POLICE"

"I didn't see the police," Riopelle told Capt. Dwight O. Mathieu. "I meant to shoot over the heads of those men to frighten them into stopping."

Police Chief Thomas Fraser said he would turn out-of-state evidence in the case over to authorities of the state in the event any of the men in the chase are charged with the death of another, which Riopelle said he was trying to avoid.

Leo LeMay, 22-year-old Lawrence bartender, shown here with an unidentified young woman, was shot to death in Methuen today after a five-mile chase in which police of Massachusetts and New Hampshire joined. Alleged slayer of LeMay was a Salem, N. H., restaurant man, who said LeMay had entered his place of business and threatened him.

SHOT DEAD IN CHASE

MONEY Action Good SIGN

INVESTMENTS IMPORTANT

By B. C. FORBES

Significant, encouraging: The decision by Washington, alarmed by events in the financial world, to increase bank reserves. Heretofore the government has seemed to take pride in proclaiming utter indifference to what happened to investments and to investors. The importance of conserving security values has been belittled.

Has the violent collapse in the value of possessions of investors suddenly awakened the powers that be at Washington to realities?

BULK INVESTED

After all, the great bulk of the savings of thrifty Americans are invested either directly in securities or are affected potently by what happens to securities. For example:

The soundness of the life insurance policies owned by upwards of eighty million Americans is governed entirely by the fate of the security markets. Every dollar of assets of Wall Street and ruin to everyone the investments of our insurance companies are poisoned, every dependent would be gravely jeopardized. Therefore, every individual and family whose savings have gone into life insurance has a very vital stake in the protection of security values.

The same is true of depositors in savings banks and savings departments of commercial banks. Investments can earn profits and repay bank deposits in full only if security values remain sound. Hence, every depositor in every savings bank is vitally interested in the maintenance of sound security markets.

Very large numbers, millions and millions, are dependent upon bonds purchased from their savings. Every dollar of value which goes out of such investments means a dollar of loss to the investor. Wise, wide-awake investors are constantly on the lookout for opportunities to make profitable switches in their holdings, but they want to be sure that they are not being misled by false values.

PEOPLE CONVINCED

Apparently the people, the rank and file of the whole nation, confide in investments. The American people have shown by their overwhelming defeat of the Democratic candidates for governor in Maine, Vermont and Republican victories in Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Cleveland today that they have implicit confidence in the Republican party.

Many of the voters who went to the polls to register their disapproval of the New Deal's policies today failed to find the names of their favorite candidates on the ballots. Why? Because they had not registered in time.

Many of these voters were among the millions today called to the colors to defend the citadel of their savings and with which to purchase the necessities of life for their families.

Many of them are now in the organized WPA workers' ranks, employed, however, reluctantly or in the capacity of strikebreakers.

Tears dimmed her blue eyes as she was called out at the clinic where she was receiving treatment for a nervous breakdown.

"That's what folks around here want, anyway," she cried bitterly. "But Al and I have made up our minds we'll stick it out until January 15, next year, when I'll be 16. Then I won't have to go to school any more. I'll stay home the way any wife should."

And sincerity is far from her normal disposition.

When she is with her Al, the world is shut out. Neighbors who have criticized her neighborly manners and the county officials who have cast her husband's name on the relief rolls, vanishing, as if by magic, from their minds.

Then she is placed, pinny-faced, behind the desk she is matched, and yet gravely conscious of its responsibility, beyond her years.

"If I go to school, it will make it all right with Cranston and state officials," she said.

"Yes, that'll make it all right with them. But what about me?" Al promised to give me his WPA envelope—it'll have $26.55 in it every two weeks—if I take care of the home he's going to fix up, and cook and mend for him.

"How am I going to do that and go to school every day? I'll have to take a bus to and from school. And then I'll have homework."

'BOUNTY' to Banks SOON

MORGENTHAU SETS DATE

By CECIL B. DICKSON
International News Staff Correspondent

Washington, Sept. 14 (INS)—A "bounty" to banks lending the government short term money will be instituted by the Treasury beginning September 22, Secretary Morgenthau disclosed today.

As a further move to push additional currency into the nation's monetary streams Morgenthau has authorized a "charge account" system of borrowing which permits banks to keep no deposit money loaned to the government at various interest rates.

This system will be followed until a study being conducted by Treasury experts on what type of securities the Treasury can best borrow new money borrowing is finished.

DISCUSSES PLAN

Morgenthau discussed his plan in principle shortly after huge gold imports started flooding the country and the monetary situation became acute. The system will be completed by early October, he said.

The gold was taken from the Treasury's stock of more than $12,000,000,000 and shifted to the ready cash account by the system of paying government expenditures and retirement of outstanding obligations.

As a part of the Federal Reserve Board and the Treasury's program to relax the present tight money conditions it was pointed that $300,000,000 would be released into the Treasury.

To keep the new Treasury money from piling up in the banks' vaults, a system of "charge accounts" was devised for the banks.

TO AID TREASURY

Morgenthau disclosed the system in explaining the $300,000,000 will be released into the Treasury. He said that the banks would be permitted to borrow the money from the Treasury at the rate of one-half of one per cent per annum.

Under the Treasury-Federal Reserve Board plan, however, the banks would not receive the money in cash. Instead, they would be permitted to keep the money in their vaults as a deposit with the Treasury.

When the Treasury pays out money for refunding, or for other purposes, it will draw checks against this new fund and it is expected that many of the checks will be deposited in banks.

Morgenthau said the new policy of "charge account" money changes effected by the Federal Reserve Board would permit three operations with little disturbance to the money market.

BETTER BUSINESS SEEN BY BABSON

BULLISH ON MARKET OUTLOOK

In an address before the Executives' Club of the Boston Chamber of Commerce today, Roger W. Babson said that a careful study of salient trade features shows that for the next year or two at least, the favorable factors far outweigh the unfavorable factors.

Mr. Babson said in part:

"General business is bound to be better this fall than last fall. With our tremendous crops nothing can stop it. Farmers, wage workers and stockholders will all have more money to spend. I am forecasting no boom; but I do promise business improvement.

"High grade bonds have seen their peak. Most second grade bonds are selling for all they are worth. We are in a gradually declining bond market.

"Money rates will gradually straighten. Bankers will find themselves just as wrong in their today's forecast of money rates as they were some years ago when money rates were abnormally high.

"As to stocks, I am still bullish for the next few months. Certain stocks are bound to sell much higher. If the country enters a period of real inflation, the bull market has only just started. Although the present technical reaction may not have yet run its full course, it is very dangerous to go short of stock today.

"After saying the above, let me say something else which may seem inconsistent. It is this: Although I am a bull, I do not understand why any sane investor will buy individual stocks today on the big board at quoted prices when, by buying the stocks of certain investment trusts, he can get the same stocks for 20 per cent less. Another thing: Do not look merely at statistics. Read the death notices. When rich men die stocks of companies which they have built up almost invariably decline.

"What about politics and labor? Well, I am optimistic on these factors. Congress is at last no longer an echo board. The New Deal is at last being questioned by the Democrats themselves.

"As for labor troubles, Lewis has been enjoying a bull labor market. He may quit in time, but the chances are he will overstay his bull labor market in 1937, as many of you overstayed the bull stock market in 1929.

"Prices of most commodities will be higher next year than they are today, but the spread may be less. It is costing too much to move goods. It would be better for all concerned if some of the money now spent on advertising and selling were used to increase wages and dividends. Mass production must be met by mass consumption. This requires lower sales costs.

"Do not say there will be a boom in the auto industry and in the building industry, as that one or the other will boom. People have not the money to both buy automobiles and build houses. This is why the building boom has today. My hunch is, however, that before long results will see that a home and kids is a better investment than a car and a fad. But before that time comes, sell your meter stocks.

"Some of you are worrying about Communism, Socialism and other 'isms.' People are entitled to equal opportunities and they will get them. People are entitled not to equal rewards, and such talk is nonsense. Gradually a social revolution will come about. It, however, will be caused by scientists in laboratories—not by radicals in Congress. A discovery for the transmutation of metals, or for the harnessing of the atom, or for killing by an electric ray would change civilization over night.

"Inflation. Certainly a talk on the business outlook would be incomplete without a reference to inflation. Notwithstanding the violent denials at Washington, inflation is steadily creeping upon us. To a large extent its harmful effects have been thus far offset by labor-saving machinery and speeding-up production. This, however, has retarded employment. Therefore, inflation is largely responsible for our unemployment situation today.

"What of the future? No one knows. I say that the chances are six to four that we are headed toward a 20-cent dollar.

"Of course, I fear that some time a day of reckoning is coming. Controlling crops, managing currency, legislating wages, hours or prices, or giving relief will not eliminate selfishness, the root of our economic and social troubles. Some year the installment debts of Main street and the federal debts of Pennyman alley will become due when there will be no money to pay them.

"The only hope for this old world lies in making an honest attempts to try Christianity. We talk and preach about it, but we have never tried it. Selfishness can be tempered only by changing the hearts of men—by being 'born again.' Legislation is fruitless, war is useless and even educations seems to be largely a veneer.

"This is why the church interests me so greatly. The future of America rests in the hands of you parents, ministers, priests and rabbis."

TRADE Conditions MIXED

CAUTION NOTE IS SOUNDED

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Sept. 14—Although most of the composite indexes of business activity show little change, it is fair to say that business conditions are much mixed, and that industrial activity has shown some slackening. Most trade reports indicate a note of caution in buying.

Probably the word "disappointment" is the one most frequently seen. On all hands one hears of disappointment in the fall prospects, or words to that effect.

The reason for emphasizing this fact is that it brings out the large amount of sentiment in the current feeling about business. And the element of sentiment largely a reaction from undue optimism a little earlier.

Many people failed to allow for such factors as the decline in farm prices and the war in China. Most of us have been prone to look for as long as moderately uncertainty and political domination of business affairs are present, the capital goods industries will remain backward. Sports will continue to follow. This applies also to the building industries.

FARM PRICES DROP

The drop in farm prices following a year of large yields is not fundamentally bearish. It is fundamentally bullish, since it allows more buying power to a larger number of the trade, both domestic and foreign. The farmer pays a large amount of money to labor, and a large number of people in other lines of trade.

Undoubtedly, however, business activity has been stimulated by the unusual conditions which produced and remain mixed and irregular for another month or two.

Some recent trade indicator continue irregular and reactionary, but consumer industry has declined in part.

A drastic reports from the South, Southwest and Northwest begin to reflect the increased purchasing power following grain and livestock advances.

INFLATIONARY "SHOT"

Finally last week the administration at last took cognizance of the danger of inflation from its own policies, and proceeded to administer an inflationary shot. This it may have done in time to prevent a boom, but hardly before it has done considerable harm to business and employment.

What did not to reverse its policy of reducing excess reserves of the banks, and thus to increase the basis. If now no increase excess reserves at that no additional borrowing will be necessary on the part of banks.

The next move, if this doesn't work, will probably be further increased government spending.

In one way or another all points toward growing inflation.

GOVERNMENTS

Quinn's Brother, 3 Women Injured

Providence, Sept. 14 (AP)—Charles Quinn of West Warwick, a brother of Governor Robert E. Quinn, was injured in a seven-car collision of motor cars in Cranston today.

Ellen B. Woodbury, 74, of West Warwick; Hester Goodrich, 60, of Boston, and Katherine Lincoln, 72, of Westerly, occupants of the car which was in collision with Quinn's machine, are in a hospital here as a result of the accident. Quinn suffered cuts and the three women suffered lacerations and shock. Mrs. Woodbury and Mrs. Goodrich were critically hurt.

Navy to Save Baggage of Refugees

Shanghai, Sept. 14 (AP)—The United States Navy today came to the rescue of American refugees stranded at Manila without baggage or personal possessions as a result of the Sino-Japanese conflict.

Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commandant of the United States Asiatic fleet, announced that two navy transports would be sent to Manila with trunks and other personal effects held up by baggage restrictions at Shanghai when Americans were hurried from the trouble zone.

SEES WAR SOLUTION

Speaking to the delegates at a luncheon in Walker Memorial, Waters also declared that proper food will put an end to all wars and rumors of wars.

He said the food technologist can show where war and war threats may be diverted as well as economic and political.

Holding that fates of nations are determined by what and how much nations eat, he asked his hearers:

"Who ever saw anyone get up from a good meal with anything but a cheerful, tolerant attitude toward his fellow men?"

Another speaker, Dr. L. V. Burton, editor of Food Industries, New York, revealed that the profession of food engineering "is in the making."

Finance Officers Hear Fixed Tax Hit

Real estate interest campaigns for fixed tax limits were characterized today by City Auditor Charles J. Fox as "the most serious menace to the stability of municipal government and finances in this country."

Speaking at the convention of the Municipal Finance Officers Association, the Boston official declared that organized campaigns by realty interests "still persist, despite evident and proven fallacies of the proposals."

"It is incumbent upon us," he said, "to take up the cudgels in a most positive manner against this insidious proposal, if we are truly interested in the continued maintenance in this country of stable and sane municipal government.

"If this menace is to be combated intelligently, if the citizens of our various communities are to be made aware of the unsound and impractical features of this proposal, then it would appear that we should raise our voices."

Beauty for All Women Seen in Right Foods

In the America of the future all women will be plump and all women will be beautiful, it was prophesied on competent authority today.

Taking the ladies first, Lewis W. Waters, vice-president in charge of research for General Foods Corp., assured 200 members of the first Massachusetts Institute of Technology food conference:

"Even the wallflower is doomed because of striking advances in food technology. Girls are prettier today than at any time in history.

DISPOSITIONS BETTER

"Our gigls are more vitally alive. They have more beautiful teeth. Proper foods even improve their complexions and sometimes their dispositions."

Coming to the men, Waters revealed that a survey of college groups showed the average student nearly two inches taller and several pounds heavier than the student of a generation ago.

The noted food authority foresaw a new era of prosperity arising directly from the continued growth of America's youth.

"Larger people require more food. Also, you food technologists may be partly responsible for a demand for larger houses, bigger beds and chairs, more textiles and shoe leather, new Pullman berths, stronger elevators, larger seats in automobiles and new equipment for offices, schools and hospitals."

HARLOW TO RUSH SCRIMMAGE

AUSTEN LAKE

Colleges Hunt Angel:

Doyle's Dictum: L. St.

Libel and London Slur

ONE WEEK FROM TODAY THE SOLONS of intercollegiate sport convene in New York to consider Walter Okeson's retirement plan. Okeson, in case you weren't listnin', is the dictator of the white-knickered bloomer-boys who honk and bleat their legalistic trumpets during the autumn.

Austen Lake

The plan, briefly, is to find a man to take Okie's place, who best combines executive savvy, social tact, familiarity with college sport manipulations, a quick eye for character, precision in keeping records and an iron nerve to survive the alternate woofings of the officials and the college coaches. The salary is nominal and the hours long. At least, Okeson is quitting because the strain of picking and assigning football officials for some 200 colleges was too exacting a job in itself. Now the Eastern college moguls want a gent who can not only pick the officials but oversee baseball and basketball as well, also operate the I.C.4-A games and keep all records. Wonder if heaven has an unemployed angel?

Doyle Goes Marshmallow

Always womanish in his mental reflexes Doyle has reserved the privilege of changing his mind. For, I recall that he said during a Boston visit with his bride-of-the-moment, the ex-Mrs. Gus Sonnenberg, that fighting was one of the few manly professions left in a world of commercial moochery and soft living. "I'd still want to fight if I had a million," he said then. If his prospective nuptials come off, Doyle will be the second run-of-the-mill prize fighter to win himself a wealthy, middle-aged U. S. heiress, Enzo Fiermonte, the Italian-born club fighter, having married Mrs. Madeline Force Astor Dick some months before he was biffed over by a ring worn veteran named Les Kennedy.

Londoner's Slur

SOME INTERESTING BRITISH VIEWPOINTS on U. S. fistic customs are contained in an issue of the London Sketch, just come to hand. One Chris Bale, pontificating on the Louis-Farr fight, writes, "Those wise guys in the States (tsk! tsk! very unBritish, Mr. Bale) have done everything possible to lose Tommy Farr the fight . . . Such a thing could never happen in this country. No, we are too polite, too open-handed and too flattering to these Americans when they condescend to pay us a visit. We put the red carpet down and treat them like little tin gods (Please, Mr. Bale, thumb back to the findings of the U. S. Walker Cup golf team after last summer's matches in Britain).

"As I have said," continues Mr. Bale, "if one of their champions is in danger of losing his title to a foreigner that foreigner gets all the raw deals going—and a few more. He has to fight a thousand fights before he gets into the ring—and once there he rarely gets a fair deal."

One commentator recalls Mr. Bale's [illegible] when [illegible] he was not content to [illegible] and every [illegible] with "incorrect behaviour." In fact, [illegible] pretended to [illegible] and were even more displeased than the U. S. newspapers.

"Sportsmanship is not an natural attribute of any one race by a studied pose and American sportsmanship has failed often in domestic and international events alike. In fact, neither is British sportsmanship reliable at all times. I think the British owe us a considerable sum of money which, though they have it to pay, have sneered at our gullibility in lending it to them and in response to frequent duns have annually retorted, "Try and get it." What's that Mr. Bale?

NOT ALL INTERNATIONAL SPORTSMEN sprout hairy. Take the case of Baron Gottfried von Cramm, the German tennis ace who [illegible] with Don Budge at Forrest Hills Saturday. Von Cramm, who lost Budge, "I played the best tennis of my life. It [illegible]." Von Cramm has established [illegible] not only a potential champion, but the most [illegible] Von Cramm, the [illegible] with the polite [illegible] Baron Carey (he met wallpaper from Eastern Ireland was granted an extension of his stay in America, comes the exalted news of a terrific embroglio involving the whole male portion of the Casey family during a Killarney wrestling match. Jim, one of Steve's brothers, was wrestling a gent named Sam Rabin, whom tactics annoyed the watching brothers and father, who leapt in and staged an uproarious shindig which ended with Rabin being scaled into the McGillicuddy Reeks.

OPTIMISM RAMPANT IN EVERETT GRID RANKS

LINE Best in STATE

BACKS NEW, BUT TALENTED

In direct contrast to the atmosphere at the majority of high school practice fields, Everett Stadium, housing the workouts of Denny Gildea's Everett high school football team, is booming with optimism as the 1937 schoolboy season approaches.

This optimism might be merely a "hangover" from last season's undefeated team that didn't have a point scored against it by an opponent from this state. But then again, the Gildea elevens usually have good reason for their high feelings.

The main cause for the joy at Everett may be traced directly to the powerful line that Coach Gildea has assembled.

All of the boys playing on the forward wall have seen service and, to all indications, should turn out to be the most powerful group in the entire state.

With this frontier there is little cause to worry about the loss of such backfield aides as Al Bombini and Bob Bell, headliners on last season's eleven. But even here Gildea is grooming a pair of backfields that, despite inexperience, should cause a lot of trouble for opponents.

BUDREAU WILL DO

With almost two more full weeks to prepare for the opening game, Coach Gildea expects to have three two-combinations working to near-perfect precision. Tom Smith will be no danger of having a powerful line opening up holes with no backs available to race through them.

The present group of first string backs worked together last year in the second team and so far has shown a lot of promise.

Charlie Budreau, a smart field general, and at present a starting back post with Tom Smith and Gil Walker at the halves and either Ed LePore or Angie Angelo at fullback.

Budreau is expected to fill the place vacated by Bombini, the scholastic back. Bombini, and his alternate Ray Bell, went from the the school championship. Bell is leading the team Budreau is the passer, kicker and smart ball carrier.

LINE PACKS WEIGHT

Smith and Walker, the colored sprinter, are both clever broken field runners. While Angelo, who Gildea boasts, these boys should be placed into the open frequently.

LePore is really a sophomore which fact may shift the starting assignment to LeBois, a heavy line backer.

The second backfield includes Billy DeRosa, Mario Gianelli, 160 pounds, Bob Fiorentino and Jim Fraser. All are sophomores.

Foremost in the replacements for these two backfields are Fred Comerford, a sophomore, Bill Dooley, Carl and Bill Johnson, Bob Piel, another sophomore, Eddie Mahoney and Charlie Brinkley, nephew of Harvard's famous drop-kicker.

The line that is certain to start in the opening game, barring injuries, packs weight as well as power.

SUBS WHOLE TEAM

Harold Everett, Boston Evening American All-Scholastic choice, is back at center, weighing 166 pounds, with Joe Puglielli, 160 pounds, and Stan Korbek, 173 pounds at the guards.

Fred DelVisco and Alec Santelli average 170 pounds at the tackles.

Jim Lombardi, boasting 152 pounds the lightest player on the list, will be at one end, while Al Marshall, the tallest boy of the squad, weighing 168, will be on the other.

As has been the Gildea type of play—the insertion of an entire new team into a game—a second line has been formed, and these boys may be sent in as a body or as first-rate replacements.

In the group John Dillon, Tony Lucci, John Hill and Russ Timmons have the call, and playing, while George Vasile and Jim Doig have staked their rights on this second line.

Bill Harvey will fill the burden at center, backed by Lou Diamond and Al Civilla.

The schedule:

Sept. 25—Concord at Everett
Oct. 2—Salem at Salem
Oct. 9—Newton at Newton
Oct. 16—Providence Central at Everett
Oct. 23—Medford at Everett
Oct. 30—Manchester, N. H., at Everett
Nov. 6—Revere at Everett
Nov. 13—Malden at Malden
Nov. 25—Chelsea at Everett

This is another in a series of articles on school football teams to appear daily in the Boston Evening American. Prospects at Malden high school, with pictures of the hopefuls, will appear tomorrow. Watch for your school.

Wrigley Field, Chicago, Sept. 14—Johnny Lanning, who has been mentioned frequently against the Cubs, pitched today in the first game as the Bees opened their last series of the season with a double-header here.

Tex Carleton, who seldom has trouble handling the Bees, pitched for the Cubs.

Manchester Boxer In 'Irish' Show

Amateur boxing writes his name as a feature in Dorchester during the summer months, will have its final card Monday night at the Dudley Street Opera House, sponsored by A. A. stages the first of a series of shows that will carry through to October and signing months.

Eight classes of competition are on the opening card with bouts in the 112, 118, 126, 135, 145, 160 and heavyweight classes.

Among the athletes entered to date are those of Tony Vendrasco of Medford, and Ray Fontaine of Manchester, N. H., 112 pounds; John Mahoney of Waltham, 118 pounds.

Valuable Prizes Await Winner In 'Ace' Test

A number of valuable prize will be awarded to the winners in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser Hole-In-One contest starting next Monday at Franklin Park.

The tournament will continue until all entries have been able to step to the tee, close by the clubhouse at Dorchester, and take their chance at one of the clubs' target, 128 yards away.

Odds against making a hole-in-one range upwards from 10,000-1, depending on the distance of the tee. The Hole-In-One Classic at Franklin Park is just as difficult to manage as one over 250 yards. For the green at Franklin Park, while a mere 128 yards distant, is surrounded from view behind a small with only the flag as a guide.

Everybody is welcome to try his skill. Women are equally as acceptable as the men. There are no fees of any sort. Just step up to the tee, swing and take three attempts.

Each of the three players in the foursome is given three tries for prize. There will be other prizes for both men and women, and those will be announced to the pin.

An entry blank appears today in the issue of the Boston Evening American, and another will appear in succeeding columns.

Fill in the names neatly and mail TODAY to Hole-In-One Editor, Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser, Winthrop Square, Boston.

You will then be officially entered.

Teachers Boost Sports Story Contest

"Sportswriters for a Day" are pumping out reams of copy and submitting it to the staff of judges doing duty in the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser High School Sports Story contest.

Most of the boys and girls are going at the job like tried and true veterans.

Surprisingly enough, these youngsters have caught on to the essentials of sports writing in apt fashion, so that the majority of the manuscripts received are bright and newsy.

English teachers in several prominent high schools throughout New England have become big boosters for the contest. Many are conducting special story classes now best of the products to be submitted for consideration.

1000-WORD LIMIT

The contest fits in nicely with these teaching schedules.

The youngsters are not only trying to turn in the most original and vivid contestants in grammatical, semi-literary skill well turned out English, but twelve writing about a subject near and dear to them, so that they will put some degree of color and atmosphere into the results, being most praiseworthy.

Any high school student, whether boy or girl is eligible to enter this American-Advertiser contest.

Stories are to be built around news or features of the writer's school team. They can be of an individual player, a group, the coach or the entire team.

Anything of interest about the team will be acceptable. Stories must be up to 1000 words, none longer.

FOOTBALL TICKETS

The writer's byline will be printed at the head of the accepted stories, which starting next Sunday in the Advertiser, will appear daily in the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

For each story accepted by the judges, the sender will be rewarded with two tickets to either a Boston College or Harvard football game of importance this fall.

As the first of the series of school stories will be printed shortly, it would be well for all potential contestants to get busy at once and get to the business of writing his or her football classic immediately.

Just address a story to the School Sports Story Contest Editor, Boston Evening American, 9 Winthrop Square, Boston.

Be sure and enclose a black girl to your name, address, age, and the name, address, and name of your school, and other pertinent information.

Grid Player Dies

Las Vegas, N. M., Sept. 14 (AP)—Tom Perkins, New Mexico Normal University halfback, dropped dead on the practice field a few moments after colliding with a fellow player in practice tonight to retain a pass. Perkins got up, ran a few paces and collapsed.

Yale Grid Team At Gales Ferry

New Haven, Ct., Sept. 14 (INS)—Yale's eleven football squad was ready to move today to Gales Ferry for their two weeks' training period.

A feeling of insecurity was voiced by Head Coach Raymond Pond in discussing the uncertainties in the tackle and end situations. The loss of heavy men through graduation will also be felt, according to the coach.

SOX SURE TO SURPASS 1936 MARK

By JOE CASHMAN

Whatever position in the American League race the Red Sox may occupy at the finish, it's virtually certain now that their showing will be the best in three seasons under the direction of Joseph Edward Cronin.

With 23 games left to play, the Fenway flock needs but three more wins to equal its last year's victory total and seven more decisions to equal its 1935 mark.

The Back Bay boys are sure also to finish a rung higher than last season, when they limped home in sixth place with only 74 games to their credit, but they must still battle to land as high as in 1935, when they came in fourth with 78 wins.

At the same time, they have a fighting chance to grab off third place.

The improvement flashed by the natives this year can be traced to a stronger punch and steadier fielding.

The pitching has been no better than last year and just as good as the season before that.

Two years back Wes Ferrell and "Lefty" Grove contributed 45 victories. No three hurlers on the current roster have turned in that many wins to date.

All of which explains why the Sox management has already completed arrangements to try out no less than ten new hurlers next Spring.

Cronin wouldn't mind having a few of the twirlers right now. He isn't yet interested in the next campaign. He's too much concerned about the current race.

He's confident he can drive his charges past the White Sox into third place, and e hasn't yet abandoned hope of grabbing off the runner-up berth, even though the Tigers are seven games away.

He points out that the Sox won 11 out of 13 and 12 out of 14 games during the past two Western invasions of the Fens and figures that if they can do nearly as well during the coming and final home stand against the hostiles from the wide open spaces. They should walk off with the largest slice of the World Series melon.

The big putsch starts tomorrow in a one-game series with the White Sox.

So anxious is Cronin to have the Sox on edge for the fray that he'll put all hands through a workout this morning, weather permitting.

Another of Boss Joe's precautionary plans finds Watertown's Bob Daughters being called in for utility infield work.

The former Holy Cross star spent the summer on the Sox farm at Rocky Mount, N. C. With both "Pinky" Higgins and Eric McNair slightly below physical par, Bob may be kept fairly busy.

RABBIT CONSIDERED

Cincinnati, Sept 14 (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds went into a doubleheader with Brooklyn today under a new temporary pilot.

Charlie (Chuck) Dressen, relieved of his managerial duties he held for three years packed his belongings at the clubhouse and said he had no definite plans for the future beyond "I still will continue in baseball."

General Manager Warren C. Giles named Bobby Wallace, who has spent nearly 50 years in baseball, as acting pilot.

Coaches Tom Sheehan and George Kelly, who Dressen once insisted remain with the club over managerial protests, also were given their unconditional release.

Speculation turned today to Dressen's successor, but Giles said the appointment would not be considered "until after the World Series."

The sudden dismissal announcement nevertheless started baseball circles to guessing between Manager Jimmy Wilson of the Philadelphia Phillies, Casey Stengel, former Dodgers pilot; Rabbit Maranville of the Montreal International Club, and Frank "Lefty" O'Doul, field general of the San Francisco Seals.

"We have the money to get the best man available," commented Powel Crosley, Jr., owner of the last place team in the National League.

Giles reiterated that a complete revamping of the team would be made this winter.

McCoy-Lenglet Bout Postponed | Danno Entitled To Robert Go

By JACK CONWAY

AL McCOY'S BOUT with Andrew Lenglet, which was scheduled to be staged in Montreal on Thursday night, is off for at least three weeks as result of a tendon the New England heavyweight champion pulled in the lower part of his left foot.

MR. BOSTON

McCoy suffered the injury last Saturday, but was of the opinion he would be all right after a day's workout. Al reported at Buckley's Gym yesterday afternoon and went through a workout with "Tiger" Warrenton.

His injured foot bothered him a great deal, and after his training he visited the Back Bay office of Dr. Martin H. Spellman. The latter had X-rays taken of the injured foot and told McCoy he could not do any further training for at least ten days.

Bill Brennan, McCoy's manager, immediately notified the Montreal promoters it would be necessary to postpone the Lenglet match for at least three weeks.

This news was a keen disappointment to Promoter Vincent, who told Brennan the advance sale had passed the $5000 mark. Vincent stated that the show was certain to draw between $15,000 and $20,000. Vincent had secured the permission to use Tommy Farr, who recently went 15 rounds with Joe Louis, as referee. With Farr as third man in the ring, English as well as French fans were vitally interested in the Montreal match.

McCoy will take things easy for ten days, after which time he will resume training for his meeting with Lenglet. The New England champion will not participate in any other matches until he clashes with Lenglet.

Jack Sharkey's $100,000 Tendon

AN INJURED tendon once cost Jack Sharkey $100,000. Sharkey had treated the boxing end of his program a bout with Jack Peterson under the direction of Paddy Mc McKirdy at Fenway Park when he decided to do a few rounds of shadow boxing at Stillman's Gym in New York. While getting set to the ropes Sharkey went back suddenly and something gave in his left leg.

Sharkey limped to Boston where an X-ray examination revealed he had a pulled tendon. He was obliged to cancel his match with Peterson under the direction of Paddy Mc McKirdy at Fenway Park when he decided to do a few rounds of shadow boxing at Stillman's Gym in New York. While getting set to the ropes Sharkey went back suddenly and something gave in his left leg.

European Order No. 19

EUROPE never tires of making plans for the United States. England and France, in particular, seem never to have heard of July 4, 1776.

"INFORMATION," the most influential and authoritative financial paper in France, now tells us it is our business to "save Germany."

The paper practically demands that:

1—The United States MUST offer Germany a ten to twenty-year foreign loan after consolidating her foreign indebtedness.

2—The United States MUST offer Germany short-term credits for nearly a BILLION DOLLARS for the purchase of raw materials.

3—The United States MUST conclude a commercial treaty with Germany guaranteeing her a market for her finished products.

4—The United States MUST offer Germany long-term credits in gold to support her market.

In each instance the EXACT SUMS are named by "INFORMATION" that she expects the United States to fork out.

THIS is the same paper which blandly informed the world last February that "the French and English governments would be DISPOSED TO CONSIDER a settlement of the debt on a fifty per cent basis if the United States would give assurances that in case France and England went to war with Germany, FRANCE AND ENGLAND COULD RECEIVE FROM THE UNITED STATES CREDITS AND MERCHANDISE WHICH THEIR ADVERSARY COULD NOT OBTAIN."

It was for this purpose, "INFORMATION" then intimated, that M. Georges Bonnet came here as ambassador.

Failing to thus get us into a war with Germany, this authoritative French paper now urges us to put Germany on her feet.

ALL this would seem ridiculous enough if it weren't for the fact that there is a BLOC in this country that is always working to get us into this foul mess in Europe.

But so long as we have a CRITICAL FREE PRESS there is no danger of these dark schemes against our well-being getting much further than the wire-pulling stage.

A New Process Swiss (Geneva) Cheese

By John F. Jordan

Switzerland is famous for more than its snowy Alps, deep valleys and scenic wonders.

Swiss cheese—the kind that is full of holes—is world famous, too.

So it is singularly appropriate that Geneva should be the headquarters of the feckless League of Nations.

Hatred, intrigue, strife and aggression have shot so many holes into the poor thing that it can hardly hang together.

Reading the Future

The Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

There are multiplying signs that a new age of superstition is at hand. If that's going too far, why, then we'll make it a new interest in the occult and the supernatural. Whichever way you take it, more and more people are grasping for some other worldly patterns and motivations of human conduct.

Hasheesh visits the voodoo doctors, stock brokers visit astrologers, suburban matrons play the tea leaves; professors hug their new theory of "indeterminate relations," which might possibly jet in the agenda. Transcontinental truck drivers carry a four-leaf clover, and a whole lot of us would feel better if we had a rabbit's foot when we read the papers. The more scared you are, the more superstitious.

Connie Ives Penola was doing nicely as a teacher in the New York public schools. She wanted to take on a shappy new line, so she became the swarthy Gypsy Lee, telling fortunes in a Bowery dive. She started with a 5 cent reading; progressed to general grand-and-dandy fortune telling, and became the president of the National Association of Fortune Tellers.
